Project Description

The intern would build a network of American mentors who would be willing work with potential Afghan exchange students to improve their testing knowledge and skills. While higher education in Afghanistan has improved in recent years, Afghan students often need additional mentoring or instruction to help them achieve TOEFL and GRE scores that would make them competitive for study at U.S. institutions – even for potential Fulbright candidates. The intern would work closely with U.S. Embassy Kabul in first establishing recruitment targets for mentors and tutors, and then develop and implement a plan for their recruitment. As mentors/tutors are identified, the intern would then collaborate with the Embassy’s network of American Spaces (called Lincoln Learning Centers) across Afghanistan to link mentors/tutors with student audiences.
